

HealthEquity Launches Mobile Application for Android and iPhone Mobile Phones

SALT LAKE CITY, October 19, 2010 – HealthEquity Inc. has launched a new mobile application for web-enabled Android and iPhone mobile phones.

The new application allows anyone with a HealthEquity health savings account (HSA), health reimbursement arrangement (HRA), flexible spending account (FSA) or voluntary employees' beneficiary association (VEBA) account and a compatible mobile phone to access real-time account balances, view the last 10 transactions from any account, and connect with HealthEquity Member Services by phone or e-mail directly from his/her mobile device.

"We're excited about the new mobile application and the added access and convenience it gives our members. Service and convenience is important to our members and employer and health plan partners, and our commitment is to always deliver," said Stephen D. Neeleman, MD, HealthEquity chief executive officer.

In addition to the initial release, HealthEquity is working on a future upgrade version of the application that will allow members to submit claims directly from a compatible mobile phone by using the device to take a picture of a receipt and then sending the picture directly from the phone as part of the claims submittal.

The application can be downloaded to an Android phone from the Android Market at www.android.com/market/ and for iPhones from within iTunes by searching for "HealthEquity."
